WALL-TO-WALL DISASTER

A speaker at the recent Mid-winter conference in Winston-Salem told about a man named Nick, whose father was Jewish and mother was an Eskimo. He billed himself as the only Juicekimo in AA.

One night in Alaska, before he joined AA, he got loaded and passed out in a hotel room. While he slept, an Alaskan earthquake tore up the hotel and the town.

Nick awoke to find the room and the town a shambles. Falling to his knees, Nick prayed: "Oh, Lord. Help me to pay for this one and I'll never take another drink."
